

Good day:

As businesses and organizations across Alberta prepare to reopen their office spaces and invite employees who have worked from home to return to in-person environments, AHS has received many questions and requests for information about how to create both a physically and psychologically safe space. As an organization we are also evaluating the needs of our employees, and planning for the lifting of work from home orders.

We are therefore planning two Community Conversations for Alberta Employers:

- June 29, 7:00 – 8:00 pm
- June 30, 10:00 am – 11:00 am

Through these Community Conversations AHS leaders Dr. Mark Joffe and Dr. Laura McDougall will share their experiences and learnings as AHS strives to create a healthy workplace – both for the many staff who have worked at our sites and facilities during the pandemic, and for those who have worked from home.

Dr. Nicholas Mitchell, Provincial Medical Director of Addiction and Mental Health will talk about how we can have respectful conversations in stressful situations; how to recognize when someone may need help; and will provide employers with resources to support their staff as we begin to transition out of the pandemic response.

To register, click on the date that works best for you. And please share this invitation with other business and organization leaders who may be interested in joining the conversation. Learn more at Together4Health.
